During the meeting at the Quirinale Palace, the Sant'Agata Bolognese company presented its commitment to social cohesion

Sant'Agata Bolognese/Rome, 14 April 2025 – The President of the Italian Republic, Sergio Mattarella, welcomed a delegation from Automobili Lamborghini at the Quirinale Palace, Rome, led by Chairman and CEO Stephan Winkelmann and several members of the management board. The meeting served as a significant institutional occasion to share the company's achievements; its role in representing Italian excellence around the world; and its standing as an ambassador of Made in Italy on a global stage.

"It is a great honour to have been received by President Sergio Mattarella at the Quirinale," stated Stephan Winkelmann. "Being here today, on the eve of the Made in Italy Day, holds special symbolic value. Lamborghini is an industrial company that combines tradition and innovation, taking Italian excellence to the world with an international outlook and strong local roots. Our bond with Italy is a source of responsibility and commitment, and every day we work to ensure that our country is represented at its best. Being welcomed into the seat of the highest Italian institution is a profound recognition for all of us."

During the visit, the delegation and President Mattarella revisited Automobili Lamborghini's main achievements over the past five years, which have seen the company undergo a remarkable transformation: continuous expansion in key international markets; a complete overhaul of the product range – now fully hybrid; and record-breaking performance in revenue, employment, and brand value. With a global network of 186 dealerships in 56 countries, Lamborghini has strengthened its international presence while maintaining a deep connection to its roots. The company stands as a beacon of Italian excellence, capable of blending technological innovation and global vision with a strong local identity and meaningful contributions to Italy's economic and social development.

The corporate culture of Automobili Lamborghini is rooted in aligning individual aspirations with the collective mission of the organisation. This approach values each person's contribution within a shared system of values, aimed at fostering not only individual growth but also collective well-being. The goal is to create a workplace where people feel motivated, engaged and part of a broader vision – while promoting social responsibility, civic engagement and cohesion.

The meeting also marked the tenth anniversary of the DESI (Dual Education System Italy) programme, launched by Automobili Lamborghini in partnership with local schools and institutions, which has already trained over 200 students and achieved one of the highest employment placement rates in the industry. In addition, the company highlighted its commitment to employee well-being through the Feelosophy programme, which supports a positive and inclusive work environment, encouraging a healthy balance between professional development and quality of life.

The meeting with President Mattarella reaffirmed Automobili Lamborghini's status as a key player in Italian industry, an ambassador of Made in Italy, and a driving force for sustainable, inclusive, and forward-looking development.
